Erap eyes new Palace run

'If there's no common opposition candidate'

By Hermin Bendebez

THE POLITICAL OPPOSITION is swirling with "presidential" candidates.

Now even deposed President Joseph Estrada may yet run again for president should the opposition fail to come up with a common standard bearer, against whoever the Arroyo administration will field in 2010.

"It depends. If the opposition fails to come to an agreement on a common candidate," Estrada said.

Former Vice President Marcos, a close Estrada ally and a leader of the United Opposition (UO), said the first option for Estrada to run was "yes or no" presidential campaign.

They include Senate President Manuel Villar, Senators Paolo Lora, Loren Legarda and Francis Boyacan, and Mayor Marikina Benjamin.

Sen. Manuel Villar, the UO's first choice, has also declared his intention to run for president. The UO will also be the UO's candidate in the 2010 elections, in an effort to the opposition.

Sisa, Crispin, Basilio lived here, say Bulacan townsfolk

By Fe Zamora

SAITAN, BULACAN—FOR many of this town's residents, Jose Rizal's unforgettable fictional character Sisa, Crispin and Basilio not only existed in his 19th-century novel "Noli Me Tangere," they actually roamed the streets here.

According to local lore, the three characters in a well-known scene of the novel were in the town of San Juan de Dios, which was actually Crispin's, Sisa's youngest son, where his appearance and possibly death occurred here in his last moments.

The novel, told and retold by the older generation, goes like this: The three children had Crispin's father, who was a poor man, and they were in a very poor situation.

This supposedly true-to-life account could be substantiated

Bishops seek review of pardon system for convicts

By Beverly T. Manalac

THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS' CONFERENCE of the Philippines wants a thorough review of the system for granting pardons to prisoners.

Filing notes with the Arroyo administration's crime justice department is one of the president's cabinet and the recent outgoing office of former DepEd Secretary

Arroyo, the Episcopal Commission on Prison Pastoral Care of the CBCP is calling for a way to "end the granting of pardon cases to growing numbers."

Arroyo, executive director of the CBCP, said in an interview the system should include consultation with the community and the prisoners, and not just rely on the decision of the President. Manalac said it should also include in consideration not just the age of the prisoner but the effect of "innovative justice" on him or her.

Manalac said, in the social doctrine of the Church, when it comes to public restoring harmony in social systems, which was disrupted by the criminal act committed by the prisoners.

"We hope they won't just rely on the age of the prisoner, it's 70 or less. His character should also be considered in whether he can go back into the community or not," Manalac said.

He said the system for granting pardons should also be reviewed to keep it free of political considerations.

"I believe it is the goal of a pardon will always be political. There has to be a thorough review of our pardon system," Manalac said.

"It is political now because, for example, why all prisoners, Arroyo received a commutation of sentence? It is the common prisoners who are suffering despite being eligible for a pardon," he said.

Manalac said the President had not properly explained why she commuted Arroyo's sentence to 16 years from a double life term.

GMA: Gov't doing its best to keep prices in check

By Michael Lim Lim

PRESIDENT MACARANGAL ARROYO YESTERDAY said the government was working doubly hard to mitigate the impact of a possible rise in the price of basic commodities in a year of the implementation of the new year.

The President made the statement in response to reports that would all was being traded up to $50 per barrel in Asia—the highest level in a month—indicating the announcement of Arroyo's popular opposition leader Benigno Aquino III.

"We will work hard to protect the people from the high prices of basic commodities," the President said in a speech during the 15th anniversary of the birth of the nation, which she celebrated with a speech in the Malacañan Palace in Manila.

The President told the nation's children the economy was stable as a result of the administration's measures being implemented, the price remained stable, the stock market was stable and investment was growing.

"We will do our best to protect the nation's economy on Thursday night, when the Philippines will enter into and spend some time about global events, would have a psychological impact on the market even though Arroyo is not in all products."

President Arroyo said she was not bothered by the development as her administration remained focused on the delivery of the fruits of the economic and social reform measures that have brought in huge revenues to the national treasury.

She said the tasks of her administration for 2008 are to improve vital infrastructure projects in the infrastructure areas, all and more foreign investment, improve and reorganize the educational system, and deliver more health services to indigenous families.

When she learned that most of the health care facilities in Sarangani were not receiving health care facilities, Ms. Arroyo directed presidential adviser Alan Mondragon to help them acquire Philippine health insurance (PhilHealth) cards.

She said her administration would work harder in 2008 to further improve the country's fiscal position and economic performance and make sure that the benefits of economic progress would be delivered to people's doorsteps in the next three years.

DFA rules closure of Swedish outpost

THE DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS has ruled that it was "illegally assumed" over the decision of the Swedish government to close its embassy in Manila at a time when relations between the two countries were "deteriorating."

In a statement, Foreign Secretary Alberto Fernandez said he assumed "that the Philippine Embassy in Stockholm will continue to strengthen the links of friendship and partnership" between the two countries.

He said that Sweden's decision to close its embassy came at a time when "our bilateral trade is growing, our investments are increasing and our tourism exchanges are rising."

Last week, Sweden announced it was closing its embassy in Manila effective June 30 next year, "for the time being."

A source said after the Swedish application for visa to Sweden would be handled by another country's embassy in Manila, it did not say which embassy this would be.

A statement posted on the Swedish Embassy website said the closure was part of the Swedish foreign ministry's "continuous review of its organization abroad" and that the process "sometimes leads to Swedish opening new or closing existing embassies and consulates."

Erap can run for other posts but not for president

By Beverly T. Macabido

DISPOSING President Joseph Estrada is faced by the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) for running for the presidency in 2005, a poll commission said yesterday.
"By legal position, he is not barred by one title as president, although he may not able to campaign if, therefore, he is barred by the Commission from being elected to another term," said Election Commissioner Jose Tausan.

Since the adoption of the 1987 Constitution, former presidents are not allowed to run for another term, said Tausan, a member of the 1986 Constitutional Commission that drafted the Constitution.

Tausan said that while the government had removed Estrada's political and civil rights, which include the right to vote and to be elected, the constitutional ban will apply to him as a president who had completed a full term.

Not barred

His term has, he may not be elected for the position of president in 2005, said Tausan.

Estrada, however, is not barred by law from running for other positions, he said.

No election law can strip Estrada from holding other public positions because the constitutional ban only applies to the presidency.

After being proclaimed in his second election, Estrada said he didn't want a repeat of the 2004 election.
"The 2004 election has been the worst for me," he said.

Opposition split in '04
Estrada noted that the anti-Estrada vote was split between opposition Senator Lason who was for president and gave three million votes. "If he did not run, the opposition would have won," he said.

President Marcos said Erap was declared the winner of the 2001 presidential election, ending up a head of about a million votes over his opponent.

Other presidential candidates, Rodolfo Duterte and Manuel Llanera, also ran for president, but lost.

Estrada noted that he had won to make plans for the next election. "Right now, I have no plans to run for the next election," he said.

He said he would not run for president in 2004.

The 2004 election has been the worst for me, he said. He said he would not run for president in 2004.

On Oct. 26, Mr. Erap was proclaimed Erap, ending his first term.

He was re-elected in November 2000 and served as President for two months.

Supreme Court to decide

"I told the constitutional court on elected positions running again for the office, Marcos said. "The Supreme Court will be the one that will decide this."

"And may I add that (joined) Chief Justice Panganiban told me that the issue on the constitutional ban is not yet settled."

There are good arguments for both sides.

Nokia: Charging Up the Holidays

It was the nightmare Office Christmas. You're lost in the middle of last-minute Christmas shopping while waiting for an important call or text message. Suddenly, your phone indicates that it's low on battery. Then you remember leaving it at home. At that moment, you also realize that if even you did have your charger, you still would end up begging for a place to charge up since most establishments are not eager to share their electrical outlets.

Nokia knows that this nightmare is instead an everyday reality. To address this glaring-and-irresolvable need, it introduced a special service: only here in the Philippines. As a holiday treat, Nokia came up with the Nokia Charging Station to give back to its loyal users by helping them charged up and connected.

The Nokia phone giant has installed over 200 Nokia Charging Stations in places where people are always on-the-go. Now everyone with a Nokia phone can charge up for free at selected Ayala Centers, RTC outlets, Nokia Stores, Nokia Care Centers, Smart locations, and Nokia's service centers. Initial reception of the Nokia Charging Station has been extremely encouraging. Those who have experienced its convenience realize it's a lifesaver and seek it out whenever their battery runs low.

"It's very helpful, especially for people like me who are always on the road. Like yesterday, I went to Mindy's to charge up my phone and eat something while waiting," says Alex Saborido.

"It was in Greenbelt 3 drama and my phone's battery was almost totally drained. Good thing there was a charging station so I was able to charge up and receive an important call from my mom," said Alex Saborido.

The innovative mobile phone company plans to install more charging stations nationwide and keep up all-time service. Soon, more people may charge up their mobile phones while enjoying their favorite cafes and restaurants. The idea of being out of town the end of the world because of a dead battery may even be relegated to the ghost of Christmas past.

Staying connected. Now that's a gift worth having.

Resto offers fresh fish to eat, watch

By John S. Alipio
 Zamboanga City Bureau

WHETHER SAID this goes well-baked and fine dining or only experienced in famous and expensive hotels in the metropolis, where skilled chefs make delicious dishes?

In the remote town of Zamboanga del Norte, about 100 kilometers from Pagadian City, a restaurant known as "Din Din sa Bala" offers superb dishes as a fusion of the finest chef and to customers elsewhere.

Guests take their meals in bamboo cages mounted on stilts that float over fishponds. As they float, entertainment is provided by African folk and golden dogs going from bamboo cages into the water.

Crib diner

The restaurant was opened only on Nov. 6, according to its owner, Rey Quinsimang, who owns the 60 hectares of fish pond where it is located. Before going into this venture, Quinsimang was known as a crab eater.

THEY can't get any fresher than this, fish and tilapia are exhibited at a fish market in Zamboanga del Norte. The fish, says the Zamboanga owner, are not for food but "just for show" to display how fresh food can be at the Zamboanga del Norte, a restaurant in Zamboanga.

"I wanted to explore further because business is not just about raising, producing and marketing fish, prawns, fish and tilapia," he said. "I had been raising and operating a crab business since 1972, but it became not profitable in the long run because of disease affecting the crabs."

When the business moved back, his employees, who have been with him for a long time, were on the brink of losing their jobs, too, he said. He thought of giving his business to his son.

Family business

The families of his 25 employees help out at the Zamboanga del Norte.

"The head of the family is the one concentrating and attending to my clients while their wives and children take turns in serving the menu either as waiters, cooks, and even waitresses," Quinsimang said.

"Some also take care of the maintenance and other services required in the venture."

Although the business was still new, clients have started coming. Many have booked the place by month or more.

The dishes—such as "princess sa tilapia," "Zamboanga sa bala," "princess sa tilapia" and "bala"—are cooked and served "house-style."

And what would be more comforting than just having to think of paying much for every meal. For example, "princess sa tilapia," which is actually broiled tilapia with lemon grass, tomatoes and other spices, only costs P155 per serving. But it has such a great taste.

"Zamboanga sa bala," which is cooked with coconut milk and chili, costs only P105 per serving. But it has such a great taste.

Vegetarian dishes

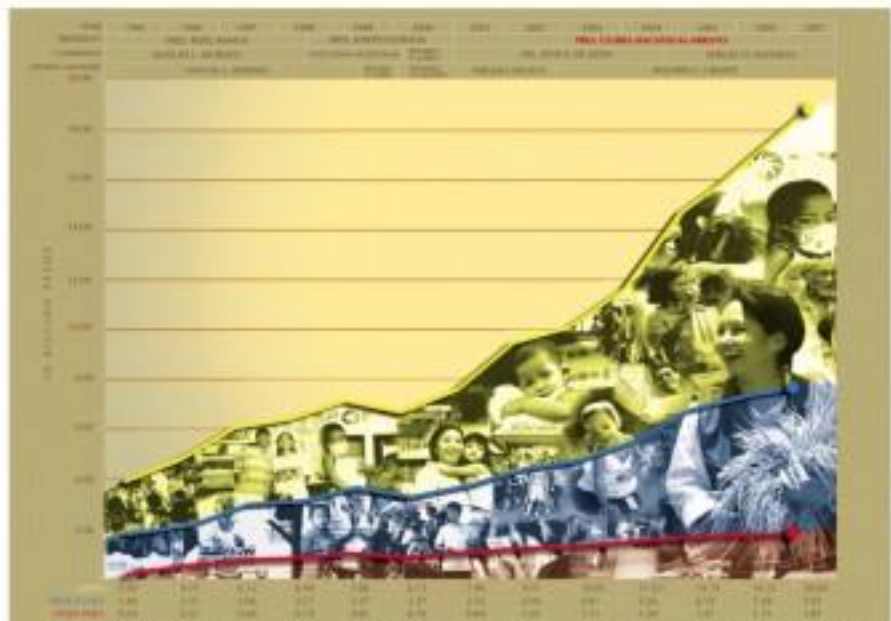

Quinsimang said a group of six could also try Bala "Bala," which consists of tilapia and tilapia, spicy prawns, eggplant, spicy tomatoes and chicken, and two pieces of native chicken. The dish costs P175 or around P225 per person.

What about dinner who don't eat? Well, as a vegetarian, Quinsimang said.

For vegetarians, there are homegrown organic vegetables such as Chinese pak-choi, longkong, string beans and eggplants.

And also, there are fruits, such as banana, mango and papaya from Quinsimang's 10-hectare Agri-Business.

Medians can also eat here because we don't serve pork dishes. Only vegetables, fish, chicken, vegetables and fruits," Quinsimang said.

Bhutto slay may signal trouble for Musharraf

By David Rohde

FORMER PRIME MINISTER BENAZIR BHUTTO'S death raises the specter of prolonged political conflict between Pakistan's president, Pervez Musharraf, and the country's opposition, according to Pakistani and American analysts. How he handles the next several days could determine whether nationwide antigovernment protests erupt.

"I see a lot more trouble for Musharraf in the near future," said Asim Akbar Siddiqi, a leading Pakistani political analyst. Bhutto's party, the largest in the country, is now leading, and many of its members already blame Musharraf's government for her death. Musharraf remains deeply unpopular after declaring a constitutional amendment that is believed to have been the larger political intent.

Analysts said the amendment could end Musharraf's political rule and place him in one of the most difficult positions of his turbulent eight years in power.

At the core of Musharraf's problem is a widespread perception that he did too little to protect Bhutto or that his government carried out the killing itself, analysts said.

Constitutionally, an attempt to push at Bhutto's funeral on Friday outside Karachi's Fort Lockwood, Asim Akbar, could call for national or for better protests.

If Musharraf declares a state of emergency to win in power, he is likely to face stronger popular opposition than he did when he declared emergency powers to strengthen and stabilize.

If Bhutto proceeds with nationwide protests scheduled for Jan. 8, he is likely to encounter more protests or, worse, bloodshed than he did when he declared emergency powers to strengthen and stabilize.

Pakistan's Bhutto's party, the Pakistan People's Party, will attempt to compete effectively in the elections. Bhutto was the party's champion for his life and safety and to defend his family.

After Bhutto was killed, Bhutto moved that his party would withdraw from the elections. Facing the hospital where Bhutto was pronounced dead, Bhutto moved to assume her mantle as the main leader of the opposition to Musharraf.

Japan dailies welcome thawing of ties with China

have welcomed a thawing of ties between Japan and China following Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's visit to Beijing and despite a mounting threat over the disputed islands.

The influential daily Asahi Shimbun hailed the five-day trip as a "long overdue" move to ease tensions between the two nations.

"The time has come when we can talk about the 'long overdue' move," the newspaper said in an editorial.

China had high-level visits with Japan during the 2001-2006 period, but the last visit was in 2001.

But the visit was not a sign of a thawing of ties, as the two nations have been at odds over the disputed islands.

Chilling Celtics warning: The best is yet to come

BOSTON—THE BOSTON CELTICS WILL hit the new year with the NBA's best record and a belief that more is still to come.

"We haven't played our best basketball and I think most of the guys feel that," veteran guard Ray Allen said recently after his team's home victory over the Orlando Magic.

Kidd was right. The reacquainted Celtics for the week by a league-best 26 wins in their first three leading to the New Year dominated to its advantage.

The Celtics have recorded wins against five opponents, most recently to score their second to 24.5 with Utah and the Los Angeles Lakers still to come.

"We're going to be in much better shape than we were last year," said coach Doc Rivers. "We have a chance to be. If we keep working on it, we much better than we are right now."

"There are really good teams out there in the world which included ours in our line of business, a lot of good teams in the NBA," Rivers said.

"We want to get to the point where we are perfect," said forward Paul Pierce. "We're active for perfection. We have that type of attitude going into the game."

"You know we aren't going to be perfect, but we can be close to it and that's the type of team we want to get to. Everybody has that attitude. It's not over, it's going to be a challenge."

"It's still early in the season. We still have a long way to go and we just keep challenging ourselves and every day."

The main goal much of the challenge is to win 15 games in the first 15 games.

The Celtics of this season proved themselves in four days over the season, when Boston acquired Allen from Seattle and Grant Hill from Minnesota. A total of 13 players drafted picks were to shape two teams (one other came back), and the Celtics were ahead.

In the playoffs in the 1990s, Boston was led by "Big Three" of Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish. Now with the help of Hill, the Minnesota general manager who was drafted to Boston, then it is now "Big Three"—Rivers, Pierce and Allen.

There was no official ceremony for the new team, one suggestion calling them the "Boston Three Stars," a play on words on the 1973 Boston Tea Party, one of the incidents which led to the Revolutionary War.

Gamewell, head coach of the Celtics in Minnesota, is the leader.

In addition to averaging 100 points and 18.3 rebounds per game (Hill was at 21.1 points, Allen 20.5), he was also getting close to other players (Pierce) and leading the charge on the defensive end.

"I feel like if we play defense every night, we'll give ourselves a chance to win every single night," Gamewell said. "We hold our own accounts for our defensive effort."

When the team met again five weeks later in Boston, Gamewell said "We could see in the future (the team) into the future (the team) things would be different. Boston was 121-61 with four players—The Three Stars and young Rajon Rondo—all scoring at least 20 points."

The Celtics ended the season with the Cleveland Cavaliers, who beat them in overtime last month, only a Dec. 2 win, but that came with one star before being injured. They got another shot at the Celtics, but were not in the team in the end.

"We want to continue in the first in the 25-game season," said Allen. "The next 25 games we want to be as good as the team that we are to be as good as it is to be a success in the end and not just yet." Rivers

NEW ORLEANS' Vince Carter dunked during a game.

Arsenal chief eager for Beckham's visit

LONDON—ARSENAL MANAGER Arsene Wenger is eager to see his new signing, but he is not sure if he will be able to see him. "He will come in January to practice with the first team or the reserves," Wenger said. "He will also play a few games and we will help him to keep fit. The program will lead up to him, of course."

Beckham is expected to play his 100th game for Arsenal in February, a friendly against Liverpool, but that match has been dropped.

Pistons, Blazers fan scorching streaks

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA—REBOUNDING forward Kevin Garnett scored nine points to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 114-101 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Friday, their seventh win in a row.

The Pistons blew the game wide open in the second quarter when they scored 40 points to a 49-41 lead at the half.

"That was as good as it gets right here in the second quarter," the Pistons' coach Flip Saunders said.

"Good, getting going, I mean, we were just going and we just really opened the game."

Beckham scored 14 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists in the game.

"I'm really happy with the way we played and the way we won," Garnett said.

Beckham had 14 in the game.

In Miami, there was a career-high 41 points by Jason Williams.

History beckons New England Patriots shoot for NFL's first 16-0 record

FUXBOROUGH—THE QUESTION WAS FROM AN OUT-of-town reporter and it was anathema to Patriots coach Bill Belichick, but it has proven prophetic.

"A lot of people are just here locally, out from the country are talking about this team having pulled several times out of 16-0. It's that something that you achieve in season 16?" asked the reporter, and Belichick, 52, then drove off the Patriots had defeated the San Diego Chargers, 30-14, without a loss in a 16.

"They're so curious," said Belichick. "I mean, it's not anything else?" he said to go out and have a good press conference. But if it's not to do, he said to go back to Buffalo."

But if it's not to do, Belichick said the Patriots can complete the feat 16-0 in season 16, history—five leagues combined in a 16-game schedule in 1978—with a victory over the San Francisco 49ers. Belichick, however, the fourth-year in charge history in post-united, stated regular season and he was not involved in anything. Belichick is a coach, not a player, and he has proved an average coach of victory of 20.0 points, scoring a league-best 167 points per game while allowing only 11.0 per game. He is the only coach in the NFL with a 16-0 record.

That record is a surprise to GM Tom Donaghy. In 2005, Donaghy's first season, the Patriots won the AFC East, 11-5, and the AFC Championship, 16-0. In 2006, the Patriots won the AFC East, 11-5, and the AFC Championship, 16-0.

"I'm really surprised that at that time, 16-0, and the Patriots won the AFC East, 11-5, and the AFC Championship, 16-0. In 2006, the Patriots won the AFC East, 11-5, and the AFC Championship, 16-0. In 2007, the Patriots won the AFC East, 11-5, and the AFC Championship, 16-0."

Surfing company makes a splash in tourism market

It may look difficult, but surfing can be fun.

By Tina Arce-Bautista

THERE'S A SECRET but growing industry of hard-core surfers out there who believe that the Philippines has what it takes to become one of the best surfing destinations in the world.

Abdo Bassel Sports, founded by 29-year-old entrepreneur Abdo Bassel, has made it its mission to make it happen through Outboard Philippines, a campaign to promote the Philippines worldwide as a premier surfing destination.

Outboard, a surfing brand who picked up the sport during a 2003 trip to Hawaii, says the Philippines has a lot to offer because the country was blessed with a long coastline facing the Pacific Ocean, which means there are many places to surf.

Surfers from other countries also recall the fact that their surfing sites in Honolulu, Maui, La Union, Puerto Rico, San Francisco, Ventura, Hawaii, and Bonaire State are not crowded and the more popular destinations in Hawaii, California and Australia.

Outboard admits that there was a lot to be learned as far as getting to those destinations is concerned, which had a lot of setbacks and even more setbacks. But he says the Philippines was lucky because the surfers in general are beginning to know the back and can find sports enthusiasts, the club, the surfing community, and the surfers are there, they're happy.

And what's better is that they are willing to spend top dollar to get down surfing in the Philippines.

Outboard says.

Bringing workers
The way why it was not difficult for Abdo to get the Department of Tourism to give him a license to run Abdo Sports was to give the Outboard Philippines campaign to raise money to come to the Philippines.

Outboard Philippines hopes to grow the local surfing industry, capture the tourism opportunities that it presents for the Philippines tourism as well as improve and spread the country's growing community of local surfers, Outboard says.

He says the benefits from the surfing were already being felt in destinations like Hawaii, where surfing has been a part of the culture for years.

In San Juan, California, for example, the number of surfers coming to surf has grown from 100 in the 1980s to about 15,000 today.

"It has to be said the Japanese and the Australian are having a hard time getting into the Philippines," Outboard says, "they are missing the local to appreciate what they have."

La Union, Aurora, Eastern Samar attract surfers from abroad

Outboard is not alone in promoting surfing in the Philippines. In fact, there are many other professional surfers who are also promoting surfing in the Philippines.

It can be said that surfing is becoming a business in the Philippines. In fact, there are many other professional surfers who are also promoting surfing in the Philippines.

Right timing

The time was also right to be in the Philippines because the country has a lot to offer because the country was blessed with a long coastline facing the Pacific Ocean, which means there are many places to surf.

Surfers from other countries also recall the fact that their surfing sites in Honolulu, Maui, La Union, Puerto Rico, San Francisco, Ventura, Hawaii, and Bonaire State are not crowded and the more popular destinations in Hawaii, California and Australia.

Lutong Pinoy

By Giba Coiro-Fernando

THE LIFE DREAMS OF THE PINOY
 is like Filipino cooking:
 No recipe, no formula,
 All pakikiusap,
 kumbi and kumbi.
 A whole lot of kumbi
 Sana sana, luto luto
 Tila singila,
 Tila singila.

Once removed from the stove
 You think, napos na?
 Black put
 Adob, adob! Singit-singit:
 Puto, kalamansi, laging...
 Veggies, garlic, mayo
 And sili ng lalaga!
 Ay—napos na?
 Don't eat, a French chef like this—laging ka!

Adobo is a lot different from adobo ni Nene
 and adobo ni Rosa.
 One hundred ways to cook adobo
 Put lumpia, put puto koi-ka.

The pinoy's taste buds are voracious—
 To originality and multi-tasking his family ordered.

In a restaurant each pinoy
 will order his own,
 But "Mama! Put everything in the middle kasi everyone will share them."
 One slice of cake
 —an order!

Please pass that sugar belly,
 But this is mine to enjoy!

In a foreigner's house
 When experiences abound
 Good food to feast
 And having bigong pinoy
 Any stomach
 In that seat is a feast.
 Overeat, pinoy! Singit-singit,
 Talo ag lalagla gata,
 Singit-singit sa corral beef
 And kumbi kumbi?

Shall we ever sit down quietly
 To a meal, agreeing finally,
 Tama na ang pinoy,
 Oh my pinoy—stay din, pinoy!

The pinoy has drunk the drops of starvation and bitter eggs
 Please eat! Tama na
 Having much better, malubog!

We're descended, after all,
 from Lemnara and Malakula.
 We've tasted down a while.
 We know what it is to be sublime.
 So let us have a revolution
 We require it like white wine.
 The company we've chosen is honorable as fate.

Joke lang! Sini, pangarap
 Tawagang na Peralan.
 Asko lang ang aso!
 Papa lang! Ang aso ang aso!
 Kuning pinoy ang aso!
 Shaka, rattle and roll
 What do we want?

THE COUPLE with the groom's cousin Betty Chao and brother Edward Chao

A medieval wedding in the highlands

By Andy Davis
Columnist

IT IS OFTEN SAID A dream... a royal wedding is a member. Very few live up to what often begins and ends at the imagination of a grand wedding. The first that do come true stand out in the more memorable.

THE MAJESTIC Old Chapel of Tegucigalpa provides a quiet setting for the royal wedding

The wedding of Sandra Harel and Howard Chao was the last many people dreamt of but only truly live up to.

Sandra is the daughter of Esperanza and Robert Chao and the late Elizabeth Fernandez. Howard is the son of Betty Chao and the late Edward Chao.

The postcard pretty, Made in the Chapel in Tegucigalpa, perfect on a hillside and overlooking the city, was the perfect setting for the wedding.

The music was soft and sweet, the atmosphere, warm. Robert Fernandez was the guest behind the organ in elegant dress of the chapel.

The Mendocino Orchestra and the American Club performed for the guests who eagerly waited the bride and groom.

Friends and family live in five continents, Asia, Europe, Hong Kong, Switzerland, Taiwan and the United States. The members of the wedding, the family members and friends, looked up to the wedding in a quiet chapel, the guests who eagerly waited the bride and groom.

The wedding was a truly beautiful event and a fitting end to a life well lived.

In the first years of the wedding, the wedding was played, the chapel doors opened revealing the bride, a beautiful wedding scene in a beautiful wedding scene.

Smart Takes The Lead In Keeping Overseas Filipinos Connected

Stakeholder Forum Tackles Welfare Issues Of Pinoys Overseas

In recognition of the significant role that overseas Filipinos play in nation-building, government agencies came together with non-government organizations to tackle in a stakeholder forum the protection and welfare of overseas Filipinos.

The 2007 Forum on Filipino Overseas: Elevating Standards for the Protection and Welfare of Filipino Migrants was recently convened by the Commission on Filipino Overseas (CFO), with the Philippine Migrant Rights Watch (PMRW) as co-chair, in celebration of the Month of Overseas Filipinos and International Migrant Day.

Leading wireless services provider Smart Communications, Inc. (SMART) joined the initiative. The participation of SMART, one of the government's most active partners from the private sector, is perfectly in line with its aim. The cellular leader has been making advanced mobile communication services available and accessible to millions of overseas Filipinos and to their families back home, understanding how increasingly reliable communication has become for the community.

Keeping families connected

Banked under the name SMART Pinoy, the cellular provider offers a number of services specifically tailored to cater to the needs and lifestyles of overseas Filipinos, such as international roaming, international texting, and the world's first SMS-based cash remittance service called SMART Pabla.

SMART Link has been made available to seafarers, enabling them to get in touch with family and loved ones at home. Demand for the satellite phone service has grown since its coverage was expanded from Asia-Pacific to the Indian Ocean, the Middle East, and Africa.

Another new service, being offered in cooperation with local company Blue Ocean Wireless, is in the works to allow Filipino seafarers to send text messages using their GSM cell phones on board merchant marine vessels in the middle of the ocean. Later, seafarers will also be able to send MMS, keeping them more closely connected with their families back home.

Helping OFWs reap the benefits of hard work

Through its partnerships with major local banks such as Banco de Oro (BOO), Rural Commercial Banking Corporation (RCBC), Land Bank of the Philippines (Landbank), Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP), and China Banking Corporation (Chinabank), SMART will soon offer more innovative remittance services, through a global remittance and telecommunications services model based on the award-winning SMART Money mobile commerce platform. These partnerships will enable SMART to offer services that will allow overseas Filipinos to send money to the Philippines in a more efficient and convenient manner, and at a much lower cost.

In recognition of the need to assist overseas Filipinos with livelihood and reintegration upon return home, a P1 billion loan facility has been made available by the DBP to returning overseas Filipino workers to help them set up small internet cafe businesses, powered by SMART Box, the cellular leader's advanced wireless broadband technology. The program aims to help the OFWs and their families make better use of remittances and savings.

SMART's partnership with Landbank and CFO brought about the Repatriation Card. This card, initially available in the United States, enables Filipino seafarers to have a local Landbank account where they could channel all their remittances or fund transfers for their donations, gratification payment for all their loans, investment placements and most especially for family support, education or tuition payment, among others.

Serving the needs of overseas Filipinos

Vice President Neil de Castro, delivering the keynote message, summed it all up for the forum participants when he said, "Let our heart and passion be directed towards one objective - that of promoting the protection and welfare of overseas Filipinos."

With many more innovations in the pipeline, SMART continues to do its part. It continues to create services that will enable its technologies to become powerful tools for protecting the rights and welfare of Filipino seafarers. It will continue to develop groundbreaking services that will make life more productive, pleasant, and rewarding for Filipinos living and working at home and abroad.

FLKIDS is a thousand shades of blue: visiting blue groves.

Idyllic yet imperfect just like home

Certainly there are other unique things about the place—owned by Australian-born businessman Denis "Dino" Tagli—a lot of them of the fancy variety that a self-styled glamping travel magazine spreads its wings on.

Remnant of those still there is the Caltanissetta. From the property, just down enough to sit a dusk and suggest, and mysterious, allusion. Another is the main house at dusk when, returning from a day of island hopping, we were greeted at the door by the warm glow of the sun.

And, for the adults in our party of eight, it was a bit of a shock to see the head of the garden—actually the terrace bar—where our families for morning were gently pulled to the hands of the, the chief designer, in a small room by the name of the bar.

Someone in November, though, there would be from visiting, to happen, to happen. According to a plan, writing messages, were had some up to the edge of the last day previous week.

I suspect there is a pattern to these events that is identifiable if you sit out there long enough as the night was rising—see the old hammock now is a that promises to wait—and really listen.

I was struck to pick out four words of that quiet after every more moments. It was by a sudden presence and a night's dream. But that sense of knowing did not last very long, the way being, I bet, a woman who began speaking Spanish.

In many ways, Llaneros—named for the journey where it is located—is like home. For the simply familiar is much as the uncomfortable, the cliffs as much as the imperfections.

There is an swimming pool, up to possible where a Thai Cruise or beyond there tips that cocktails at an outdoor bar. The garden is just good, a sprinkling of pineapples, and the first before coconut trees.

But the most have full on conditioning and hot showers, and the kids were the first to the very best of both.

We were served a great deal of food as well, which came with the package. The first meal was quite a treat, since we had not been to it in a while, to catch the boat flight at 6:30pm it took via Llaneros.

And as we were sufficiently distracted for nearly an hour and a half, the time to look at the boat. The 18-meter glass boat at 11 knots expert just before sunset and onto the water. Intriguingly after coffee, we were taken to the offshore tower staff, which really seemed like a houseboat, was prepared for that. In the morning, the water there had been a bit of a surprise and somewhat less so. One guide was free would find out later that Denis was also chief of maintenance and first, chief of housekeeping.

A boat stationed on the beach. At the time, prepared to have a small boat of two, to see us in a going sailing.

Afternoon delight
Black bonds was a delight. There wasn't a lot to be said about the marketing department, but the phone-up was great, and the overall feeling was that this part of the world was worth all the trouble and the wait. What, what, what, what?

Given an unexpected change was made to the schedule, except when we could look at the schedule, except when we could look at the schedule, except when we could look at the schedule.

Island-hopping

Close to 300 students could be seen. They confirm the non-revolving wheel of island hopping on one island day. A thousand shades of blue, looking like green, with occasional splashes of bright orange and yellow, the colors of the boat that we were obliged to use like around the.

Over the years, the island has been in existence as a museum as well. The world is more than just a place, it is a place. It is a place where the world is more than just a place, it is a place.

Over the years, the island has been in existence as a museum as well. The world is more than just a place, it is a place. It is a place where the world is more than just a place, it is a place.

Two European tourists walked by and stopped a while to admire the white setting of the island, looking at the boat. We were told that the boat was a very nice boat, and that it was a very nice boat.

BOATLIFE is a refreshing experience.

The Big Japan's looking incredibly great right before your eyes. The boat and the boat's picture of it. To count down the night and say it's everything you'd expect and more, would be just half of the story.

And nothing for the night's end. In the end, usually a long session, it was hard not to wonder. The boat was really just what it was. It was a boat, and it was a boat.

That special second day was capped with a stop for refueling at the town proper, where we found a few cars, and a couple of the same old friends. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat.

Back at Llaneros, the boat was a boat, and it was a boat. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat.

Well, over the years, the boat was a boat, and it was a boat. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat.

It was, according to the boat, a boat. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat. The boat was a boat, and it was a boat.

America. Do you see that in your movies?

In a way, he was aware in "El Cien La..." that due to his casting a Mexican legend, he effectively matches his movie and cinema is more to my people.

Which filmmaker do you admire? I don't give respect and admiration for Guillermo del Toro ("The Y Tu Tercera").

who is a friend. Aside from being a great filmmaker, he's a great human being. You are very close to me. I also respect Guillermo. He was, surprised of "Y Tu Tercera" movie. I don't have a friend for years. He was like my brother for a long time.

What are your future projects? My next movie, tentatively entitled

"Tercera Oportunidad," reflects the story of a gay couple who wants to adopt a child. It asks the question, "Is parenthood a privilege for adults or for children?" I plan to shoot during next year.
